Find Farm Stands & U-Picks With Oregon's Bounty

Use a smartphone to easily find farm stands, u-pick fields, on-farm festivals and get driving directions with Oregon's Bounty at www.oregonfb.org.

Strawberries, asparagus, squash, and salad greens -- not to mention a vast array of bedding plants, flowering baskets, and fresh-cut flowers -- are just a few favorites of the agricultural bounty of spring. But if you want to buy directly from the source on a trip out to the countryside, where do you go?

"Everyone knows where their local farmers market is. But what about farm stands, u-pick fields, and on-farm festivals out in rural areas? That's where Oregon's Bounty comes in," said OFB Communications Director Anne Marie Moss.

Oregon's Bounty at oregonfb.org is a searchable directory of over 300 family farms and ranches that sell food and foliage directly to the public.

Easily navigable with a smartphone, Oregon's Bounty allows visitors to search for specific agriculture products - like strawberries, cauliflower, and eggs -- and/or search for farms within a region of the state. Visitors can also do a search for "u-pick" or "events" to find farms that offer those activities.

Once a farm stand is located, visitors can get driving directions from their current location or another address.

"Oregonians love farm-fresh food. Thanks to the diversity of Oregon agriculture, we can buy an enormous variety of fruits, vegetables, meat, nuts, flowers, and foliage directly from the families who raised it," said Moss.

"Each of the farms listed in Oregon's Bounty are owned and operated by Farm Bureau members, who are proud to share what they've raised with the public," said Moss. "Spring is a great time to take a trip into the beautiful countryside and experience Oregon agriculture firsthand."

The state's largest general farm organization, Oregon Farm Bureau (OFB) is a grassroots, nonpartisan, non-profit organization representing the interests of the state's farmers and ranchers in the public and policymaking arenas. First established in Oregon in 1919, Farm Bureau is organized in all 36 counties and has 7,000 member families that are professionally engaged in agriculture.

Cascadia Rising Earthquake and Tsunami Response Exercise Scheduled for June 7-10

Recently, much media attention has focused on the Cascadia Subduction Zone, an area off the Pacific Coast that threatens to deliver the most destructive earthquake and tsunami in North American history. While the topic has recently gained interest from the public and media, State and Federal partners have been working with City, County and tribal emergency management entities to plan for this real eventuality, and working for many years to hone response plans and to ensure emergency response

*Whether you have Welsh heritage or not, you will be very welcome at this authentic Celtic cultural event.
Everyone is encouraged to participate in the singing.*

It is indeed a pleasure to participate in four-part hymn singing, which had its origin and early development among the Cymry - or as the English call them - the Welsh. In Wales, the small village chapels nestled in the lovely green valleys were centers of religious and social life. After services, the Welsh would linger in chapel to practice old hymns and learn new ones. This tradition continues at Bryn Seion Welsh Church in Beavercreek, Oregon. This church was built in 1884 by Welsh immigrants and is still active today. Old group photos on the church walls reveal the church's earlier days and may even include images of your ancestors. People come from all over the Northwest for this song festival, so come early to get a seat inside. The chapel may be full at the 2:00 PM session, but there is always plenty of room inside at the 6:00 PM session. It will be a full day and you can attend any or all of the activities. Some outdoor seating is provided, but there are no reserved seats.

The mission of Bryn Seion Welsh Church is to serve God and the community in accordance with the gospel of Jesus Christ, while preserving the Welsh heritage of the region.

Church services are held at Bryn Seion every 2nd and 4th Sunday of the month at 11:00 AM, with Bible Study at 9:30 AM.

Bryn Seion (Mt Zion) was built in 1884, and is the last active Welsh church on the Pacific Coast.

partners are in sync to save lives and property when the "big one" hits.

Much of this planning will be put to the test over four days, June 7-10, when Cascadia Rising, a region-wide functional exercise, is conducted. It's called a functional exercise because it tests specific functions and capabilities emergency management agencies have in place to respond to such an event.

As an emergency preparedness exercise that encompasses all aspects of emergency response, the exercise brings together multiple states (Oregon, Washington, Idaho), and FEMA to prepare for a mega 8.0-9.0+ earthquake. Major Oregon cities, 23 counties, nine tribal nations, 17 State agencies and departments, the American Red Cross, and two private sector partner organizations have signed on to participate.

Emergency Operations and Coordination Centers (EOC/ECCs) at all levels of government will activate to coordinate simulated field response operations within their jurisdictions and with neighboring communities, state EOCs/ECCs, FEMA and a variety of military resources.

"Cascadia Rising will assess plans, processes, and our ability to communicate and coordinate to help to ensure that our emergency response partners across the region are working effectively and efficiently to protect lives, property and the environment during a catastrophic disaster," says Andrew Phelps, OEM director. "Specifically, it's an opportunity to provide decision makers with information to implement programs and policies that allocate and manage resources efficiently with urgency during a Cascadia Subduction Zone earthquake and tsunami, and other disasters."

Although Cascadia Rising is not geared toward public participation, Phelps notes that Cascadia Rising provides an opportunity to show the public that government agencies are diligently working to be prepared for emergencies. Phelps said this is fundamental to public safety and community resilience.

The public may be kept abreast of Cascadia Rising activities through social and traditional media, including a Cascadia Rising kickoff Twitter chat on June 6 using hashtags #CascadiaRising, #CascadiaEQ.

"Cascadia Rising is a perfect time for everyone to evaluate their family emergency plan and update or establish emergency kits," added Phelps. "Remind yourself and family members of established exit routes, contacts, meeting places and other components of your emergency plan that will be important after a disaster."

Fire Camp For Young Women: Applications June 13

Do you know a young woman who might be interested in becoming a firefighter? Please help us get the word out about an amazing opportunity for young women who have the potential for a career in the fire service.

It is never too early to start thinking about a non-traditional career. Portland Fire & Rescue, aka PF&R, sponsors a Fire Camp, July 15, 16 and 17, free to young women age 16-20, to explore what a career in the fire & rescue service entails.

Who can be a firefighter? Anyone who is physically and mentally capable, is a problem solver, has good mechanical aptitude, and takes pride in helping others.

The camp, which is hosted at PF&R's training center, offers instruction by women firefighters, including many of PF&R's own. Young women will participate in workshops utilizing some of the tools and equipment used in fire & rescue work, learn about teamwork, understand how to prepare for an interview, and be certified in CPR. Campers will receive hands-on experience with hydraulic rescue tools, search & rescue operations, and hose operation.

Find out more and access the camp application here: <https://www.portlandoregon.gov/fire/firecamp>. Applications are due June 13, 2016.

Oregon Hospitals Offer Cost Estimates Within Three Days

Recently, the Oregon Association of Hospitals and Health Systems announced that every Oregon hospital can provide a cost estimate for hospital services for a scheduled procedure within three business days. This voluntary policy helps uninsured or out-of-network patients to understand their potential costs for services provided at the hospital. Most insured patients, however, will find more useful information on costs by contacting their insurer, who can provide specific estimates based on their particular plan.

To facilitate access to this information, OAHHS also announced that the OregonHospitalGuide.org website now features a "Cost Estimates" section for each hospital in the State. This new section provides comprehensive information for consumers to contact hospital cost estimate and billing departments. It also links directly to each hospital's financial assistance policy, which can be helpful for people who need help paying their bill.

"Patients, whether they are insured, out of their health plan's network or lack insurance all together, should be able to get a good faith estimate directly from their hospital for the cost of a procedure ahead of time. And, when coupled with the corresponding commitment of Oregon's health plans to provide costs estimates for the vast majority of our State's residents who are now insured, every Oregonian, whether insured, uninsured or out-of network can get the financial information they need to make better healthcare decisions for themselves and their families," said Andy Davidson, OAHHS President and CEO. "We are very proud of this pro-consumer commitment by Oregon hospitals."

"We commend OAHHS and its member hospitals for their accomplishments and for their commitment to improving price transparency," said Healthcare Financial Management Association President and CEO Joseph J. Fifer, FHFMA, CPA. "Oregon is among the first hospital associations in the nation to adopt the recommendations in the HFMA Price Transparency Task Force Report, which reflect the industry consensus on price and quality transparency."

Oregon Holding Onto Forests, Farms and Rangeland

Oregon has done remarkably well in preserving forests, farms and rangeland from development, according to a recent study, "Forests, Farms, and People: Land Use Change on Non-Federal Land in Oregon, 1974-2014." The researchers pored over thousands of aerial photographs to compare changes in the use of private and non-federal public lands from the mid-1970s through 2014.

Conducted by the U.S. Forest Service's Pacific Northwest Research Station and the Oregon Department of Forestry, the study included three key findings:

1. Ninety-nine percent of all non-Federal land in Oregon that was in resource land uses in 1984 (after comprehensive land-use plans were implemented) remained in those uses in 2014.

2. Development of resource land to low-density residential or urban uses was consistent with land-use goals, plans and zoning. Most development of resource lands occurred adjacent or close to existing developed areas, thereby minimizing development scattered though Oregon's forests and farm lands.

3. Structures continued to be built on lands remaining in forest, agricultural and range uses at high rates, even after the implementation of county comprehensive land-use plans. But the impact of these additional structures on management of Oregon's resource lands was lessened, because most of the structures built are relatively close to land in low-density residential or urban uses.

According to forest economist Gary Lettman, one of the study authors, questions remain despite the recent slowdown in building on Oregon's resource lands.

"With projected economic growth and increasing populations, how will these increases in population be accommodated while protecting remaining resource lands from development?" he said. "And will it be possible to have affordable housing in Portland, Bend and other Oregon cities while still protecting remaining resource lands from development?"

Other questions in need of answers, he said, include how development is affecting wildland fire protection and suppression costs, water quality, and land-use conflicts. Research should also be conducted to look for opportunities where underproductive resource land can be released

Drought Impacts Conifers From Willamette Valley to Roseburg

Foresters and the public reported tree damage and delayed effects from last year's drought on forests throughout the Willamette Valley. Last year's high temperatures, the warmest on record, coupled with a limited snowpack increased the drought's impact. Drought affects trees by causing internal moisture stress that can damage trees and make them more susceptible to disease and insect damage.

Trees impacted by drought can show symptoms like abnormal foliage loss, dead branch tips throughout the canopy, dead branches, dead trees and tops. These symptoms are most visible during the spring following the drought, typically May-June.

"Despite increased rain and snow earlier this year alleviating the drought conditions, the intense drought over the past three years damaged some trees permanently and others are showing signs of stress," said Sarah Navarro, a forestry pathologist for the agency.

Rain will determine whether some of these trees recover or die. If drought -- a prolonged period of abnormally low rainfall -- returns more trees will show signs of stress. However, people can help their trees through these preventative efforts:

- * Plant drought-tolerant tree species
- * Control vegetation (especially grasses) that compete for soil moisture
- * Remove and destroy dead and dying trees, blow-down and slash to reduce insect infestations
- * Avoid damage from machines and soil compaction
- * Irrigate landscape trees during dry weather, applying water slowly or use drip irrigation lines.
- * Do not alter drainage patterns (ditches, ponds, etc.) near established trees.
- * Do not fertilize during drought conditions. Fertilizing trees can dehydrate them more quickly.

The Legal Requirements of Boating

In Oregon, boaters must have a certificate of title, certificate of number, and validation stickers to operate a motorboat of any length or sailboat longer than 12 feet legally on public waterways. This includes boats that are documented with a recreational endorsement by the U. S. Coast Guard and principally used or moored in Oregon.

Documented boats that have a recreational endorsement do not have an Oregon certificate of title and do not need to display an OR number, but are required to register and display a current validation sticker on both sides of the aftermost part of the hull in the upper, square foot, below the deck line. All other recreational boats moored in Oregon are required to have current validation sticker.

The certificate of number, commonly called the "registration card," is a pocket-sized card that must be on board and available for inspection by an enforcement officer whenever the boat is being operated.

The registration number is specific to the boat and is issued with the title and registration. The registration number (OR#) and validation sticker (decal) must be displayed on where from a month to four months, depending on the boat dealer or other documents that may be needed to complete the transaction.

Failure to have a certificate of registration for documented vessels is a B violation and a $260 fine. Failure for a boat operator to carry a certificate of number is a D violation and a $110 fine. Boaters can also be cited with failure to obtain a title, a D violation with $110 fine.

the starboard and port side bow of the boat. Once a number is issued, it can be painted, applied as a decal sticker, or otherwise affixed to the bow and placed above the water line so it can be read easily. Numbers are read from left to right on both sides of the bow and must be in 3-inch high block letters (not slanted) and separated by at least 2 inches. Letters must be in a contrasting color to the boat's hull color or striping.

The validation sticker (a decal good for two calendar years) must be affixed on each side of the boat and placed in line. The sticker on the port side is after the OR number and on the starboard side, before the OR number. The decal expires on December 31 of the year indicated on the sticker.

The certificate of title, certificate of number and validation stickers (decals) can be obtained by completing an application and submitting the proper fee with documentation to the Oregon State Marine Board. Many boat dealers will submit the documents on your behalf for an agent fee.

Clackamas County Unveils Proposed FY 2016-17 Budget

Clackamas County Administrator Don Krupp has announced the County's fiscal year 2016-17 proposed budget of approximately $720.6 million and an all-funds proposed budget -- encompassing other county agencies and service districts -- of approximately $973 million.

The Administrator's Budget Message identified program and department highlights from the last year, as well as recommended allocations for the coming fiscal year. Krupp also addresses the impact to the county if voters in Damascus approve a measure to disincorporate as a city.

"This proposed budget seeks to bolster core internal infrastructure and critical services. These are not 'nice to have' items. It also prioritizes efforts that align with the strategic goals of Performance Clackamas and represents key investments that can be leveraged in future years," Krupp said.

A budget committee made up of the five County Commissioners and five citizen members will begin a series of public meetings on the budget Tuesday, May 31 and continue throughout the week. Hearings on County-governed districts and agencies will be held June 6.

A public hearing on the general County budget will be held Thursday, June 2 in the Development Services Auditorium, 150 Beavercreek Road, Oregon City, at 5:30 p.m.

As they work toward an approved final budget, the committee will review all departmental requests and may modify the Administrator's Proposed Budget according to their own priorities.

The public is welcome to attend all budget meetings and to provide input and testimony at scheduled hearings. Budget meetings are audio taped and posted online for the public within 48 hours.

Protecting Our Waterways From Invaders

It's been six years since the Oregon Legislature enacted the Aquatic Invasive Species Prevention Program, aimed at protecting Oregon's waterways from the economic and environmental devastation experienced in the Midwest from invasive quagga and zebra mussels. Since the program's inception, the Oregon State Marine Board (OSMB) and Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) have issued an annual report highlighting the year's activities to include mandatory check stations, education and outreach, and program finances.

In 2015, ODFW completed 12,953 watercraft inspections of trailered boats and non-motorized boats at mandatory roadside check stations along border points of entry. Two hundred and eighty one of the 12,953 boats inspected were contaminated with invaders: 207 with aquatic vegetation, 33 with marine organisms, and 29 with freshwater organisms. The remaining 12 were contaminated with either quagga or zebra mussels originating from Arizona, Louisiana, Michigan, Nevada, Ohio, Ontario, Pennsylvania, Utah and Wisconsin. These boats were decontaminated with high pressure and hot water at the inspection stations.

In addition to the inspection stations, OSMB and ODFW expanded education and outreach efforts by distributing printed materials through additional partnerships with park rangers, river rangers, biologists, and researchers.

Another enhancement was increasing on water enforcement of the permit and education about the program. In 2015, officers documented 47,781 contacts with boaters. Most of these boaters were in compliance, however, 810 warnings were issued for boaters who did not have an aquatic invasive species permit, and 356 citations were issued.

Some of the permit fees were dedicated to monitoring Oregon's waterways. Portland State University's (PSU) Center for Lakes and Reservoirs supported two programs: monitoring waterways for zebra and quagga mussels, and continuing the Oregon Lake Watch Program. With the help of volunteers who "adopt" a waterway, these individuals were provided technical field training and equipment to sample the waterbody a few times during the year. PSU collected the data and tracked locations where aquatic invasive species of concern were found.

Aquatic Invasive Species revenue is also being used for targeted removal efforts. In 2010, an invasive colonial tunicate (Dideemnum vexillum) was found in two locations: The Charleston Marina and Winchester Bay's "triangle" on the southwestern Oregon coast. In 2015, an underwater suction dredge was purchased and will be used in 2016 at the Winchester Bay location to begin removing the tunicates from where they are growing. Monitoring at the Charleston Marina continues, with any found tunicates being removed by divers when found. The annual dive surveys indicated a population decrease in this location.

Revenue generated from the permit sales slightly increased over 2014, with $796,753. There were 77,766 motorboat owners who renewed their boat registrations, which include a $5 surcharge that goes directly into the AIS fund. Out-of-state boaters purchased 4,979 permits, 2,300 permits were sold to guides and rental facilities and 52,271 permits were sold to non-motorized boat owners (number includes annual and two-year permits).

All of the permit fees go directly into the AIS program that funds inspection station staff, decontamination equipment, education and outreach materials, and waterway monitoring.

Sheriff's Office Joins Nationwide 'Click It Or Ticket' Campaign May 16-29

From May 16-29, 2016, the Clackamas County Sheriff's Office joined law-enforcement agencies across the State and country to participate in the national "Click It or Ticket" campaign in an effort to save lives through increased seat-belt use.

This enforcement period came ahead of the Memorial Day holiday -- one of the busiest travel weekends of the year.

According to research conducted by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), while 88.5 percent of passenger vehicle occupants buckled up in 2015, almost 50 percent of occupants of fatal crashes nationwide are not restrained. In some states, the rate is as high as 70 percent unrestrained in fatal crashes. This fact gravely highlights the need for increased enforcement and awareness of seat belt use.

This year, NHTSA's aim was to increase campaign participation even more by coordinating a "Coast to Coast" seat belt enforcement effort -- to include all law enforcement around specific interstate corridors.

Time after time, we see the deadly results that come from drivers and passengers refusing to wear a seat belt. Wearing a seat belt is one of the most important steps in increasing survivability in a crash. Our job is to stop those who are not buckled up, and to keep them from repeating this potentially deadly mistake.

In 2014, nearly half of the 21,022 passenger vehicle occupants killed in crashes were unrestrained, according to NHTSA. During the nighttime hours of 6 p.m. to 5:59 a.m., that number increased to 57 percent of those killed. Law enforcement agencies will write citations day and night, with a zero-tolerance approach.

Hundreds of thousands of citizens travel on Memorial Day weekend, as well as throughout the summer vacation season. The Sheriff's Office joined agencies across the nation in wanting to make sure that people are buckling up to keep themselves and their families safe. It is the greatest defense in a vehicle crash.

Hilltop Fire Station in Oregon City to be Temporarily Closed

The Fire District has discovered a significant health concern at the Oregon City Hilltop Station located at 19340 Molalla Avenue. A positive test for two types of mold in the living quarters, one of which is toxic and can cause respiratory illness, has been found. Steps have been taken to isolate and seal off the affected areas as we address this issue. A temporary closure of Station 16 will occur between May 5, 2016 and June 5, 2016 to ensure the health and safety of our employees, volunteers and visitors. Emergency response apparatus and personnel are being relocated to the John Adams Community Fire Station and the South End Community Fire Station 17 in Oregon City. In partnership with the Oregon City Police Department, we have secured office and parking space for Medic 16, which will serve the Hilltop area Monday-Thursday 8:00-6:00 pm.

Experts Urge Caution With Popular Painkillers

People who regularly reach for widely used painkillers like Ibuprofen and Naproxen may need to think carefully before they pop those pills, heart experts say.

Mounting evidence has shown that chronic use of non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) can raise a person's risk of heart attack and stroke.

The evidence is strong enough that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration ordered drug makers to toughen warning labels on both prescription and over-the-counter NSAIDs. The tougher warning does not include aspirin, an NSAID that has been shown to lower heart risks in some patients.

Most people who occasionally take ibuprofen (Advil, Motrin) or naproxen (Aleve) for infrequent headaches or pain don't have to worry, as long as they follow the dosage directions on the bottle, said Dr. Richard Chazal, president-elect of the American College of Cardiology.

However, people who have existing heart problems or carry risk factors for heart disease need to carefully weigh the pain relief they'll receive against a definite rise in their risk for heart attack or stroke, said Chazal.

Doctors are also concerned about people with chronic pain problems who use NSAIDs on a regular basis, even if they have good heart health, said Dr. Mark Creager, president of the American Heart Association and director of vascular medicine at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

"Even after just several weeks of use of an NSAID, the risk of heart attack or stroke goes up," Creager said. "The risk is high with regular use, and it's likely that the risk is greater when higher doses of these drugs are used." People who fall into these categories should talk with their doctor about their use of NSAIDs, to see if there are safer alternatives and to become more aware of their personal risk, experts said.

Studies estimate that a person's relative risk of heart attack and stroke increases between 10 percent to 50 percent when they regularly take an NSAID, depending on the particular drug and the dose being used, according to the FDA.

What's the connection? Researchers suspect that certain NSAIDs might alter the lining on the walls of blood vessels, increasing the risk of blood clots that can cause heart attacks or strokes, Chazal explained.

The current warning on NSAID packaging reads: "NSAIDs may cause an increased risk of serious heart thrombotic [clot] events, myocardial infarction [heart attack] and stroke, which can be fatal. Patients with heart disease or risk factors for heart disease may be at greater risk."

The updated warning says: "NSAIDs cause an increased risk of serious heart thrombotic events, including myocardial infarction and stroke, which can be fatal. This risk may occur early in treatment and may increase with duration of use."

The FDA also is warning people who regularly use NSAIDs to be careful about using other products that might contain an NSAID, such as a multi-symptom cold product. Chazal agreed that some people will need to continue using NSAIDs, but said that they still should work with their doctors to explore alternative medications and therapies.

Tractor Safety Trainings Available

Oregon State University's North Willamette Research and Extension Center (NWREC)—located south of Wilsonville—has developed a farm equipment safety training program for youth and adults. During the past four years, more than 250 people have participated in these programs.

The next youth tractor safety training and certification session at NWREC will be June 13-15. Space is limited to 20 students to ensure adequate hands-on learning. Call 503-678-1264 for more information or to register—or visit the NWREC website home page at <http://oregonstate.edu/dept/NWREC>. The cost of registration is $75. Scholarships are available.

The youth training includes 24 hours of classroom and field training with participation in the entire training required for certification—including a written examination and tractor driving skills testing.

Mike Bondi, Director at NWREC, says, "Youth from 14 to 18 years old need to be certified to be employed on farms. Insurance and liability coverage requires this. Besides, it's critically important that anyone operating equipment has basic safety training from professionals."

The training we offer meets the national standards." Bondi goes on to say that the NWREC trainings provide hands-on learning on different types of tractors, practicing driving skills, pulling trailers and backing, hooking up 3-point implements, and emergency fire tactics. The training instruction is led by NWREC's three farm operations staff to ensure plenty of individual training assistance from

"These are wonderful learning opportunities in the community for people operating farm equipment to keep everyone safe and protect their investments," said Bondi. "I don't know of another place in the Northwest where you can get instruction like this in a comfortable learning environment, and real hands-on experience from instructors working with farm equipment every day."

First Look at 2017 Proposed Health Insurance Rates

Oregon consumers can now get a first look at proposed rates for 2017 individual and small employer health insurance plans.

Health insurance companies submitted rate requests to the Department of Consumer and Business Services, Division of Financial Regulation on May 2. The division must review and approve any rates before they can be charged to policyholders.

"For the next two months, we will analyze the requested rates to ensure they adequately cover costs without being too high or too low," said Insurance Commissioner Laura Cali. "Our open process allows Oregonians to see everything we do and provide comments on the filings that affect them."

The proposed rates are for plans that comply with the Affordable Care Act for small businesses and individuals who buy their own coverage rather than getting it through an employer.

In the individual market, 10 companies submitted average rate change requests ranging from 0 percent to a 32.3 percent increase. In the small group market, 12 companies submitted average rate requests ranging from a 5 percent decrease to a 17 percent increase. See the attached chart for the full list of rate requests.

Starting May 6, Oregonians will be able to search rate filings and submit comments at oregonhealthrates.org. Once scheduled, hearing information will be posted to this website.

Oregonians are encouraged to comment on rate change requests during the public comment period, which is open May 6 through June 24. The public can submit comments online and during public rate hearings.

Preliminary decisions will be announced June 16, and final decisions will be released July 1.

police officers attempting to serve the arrest warrant.

During the attempt to arrest, the suspect was shot. Officers reported this over the radio and additional police officers from surrounding agencies responded. The officers on scene immediately began rendering first aid to the suspect and requested paramedics respond for a gunshot wound to the suspect.

When paramedics from American Medical Response and Clackamas County Fire District 1 arrived they provided additional medical treatment for the suspect. Life Flight responded to the location, but the suspect was pronounced deceased while still at the scene.

A deputy medical examiner with the Clackamas County Medical Examiner's Office was called to the scene along with the Clackamas County Inter-Agency Major Crimes Team to investigate the incident.

The suspect has been identified as 38 year old Travis Anthony Moore who lived at 210 S 2nd St, Apt B, in Oregon City.

There were two Oregon City Police Officers involved in the initial incident. One police officer sustained minor injuries during the incident. He was treated for those minor injuries at an area hospital.

South 2nd Street between Hwy 99E and Tumwater Drive was closed for several hours while investigators processed the scene.

The presentation included site elevations and perspectives of the proposed buildings. It was also announced that the 2nd Annual "Farm Social" will be held at the farm on July 9, 2016, from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. This is a free event. See ad on page 16 for more information.

Public Comments: Discussion of the ongoing violations at the horse stables on Henrici Road ensued.

Land Use Applications: None.

Land Use Decisions: The application for the renewal of a Home Occupation Permit for a gutter installation business located at 21332 S. Beavercreek Road was denied due to non-compliance of permit conditions

Application for a Home Occupation Permit for a construction business at 16085 S. Ivel Road was approved with conditions.

Old Business: It was noted that zoning changes to the old bus barn location at the intersection Mapelane, Hwy 213 and S. Beavercreek Road was under appeal with LUBA.

The LUBA appeal on the Beavercreek Road Concept Plan was also discussed. At the April meeting a motion was made and voted on to talk to County Counsel to verify the information presented by Elizabeth Graser-Lindsey (appellant) to see if the Hamlet could legally file as an intervener in the land use action and if so, pay the fee and do it. It was discovered that the Hamlet could legally file as an intervener, but would be required to acquire an attorney and file a brief to join the action, not just pay the $100 fee and file a request to intervene. As a result the Board determined it was not in the best interest of the Hamlet to proceed with an intervention at this time. Chair Tammy Stevens read an outline of the events that transpired in making that decision.

Resident, Frank Barley, was disappointed with this outcome and chastised the Board for their actions. Mr. Barley made a motion to duly note the disappointment of the citizens with the Board for not supporting their interest and requesting that all requests in the future from the citizens, as agents, be supported by the Board, as executives. The motion was seconded and discussed thoroughly, but did not pass.

New Business: The Flea Market to be held July 16th at the
