September Hamlet Recap

The guest speaker this month was Stacy Ludington from the Clackamas County Office of Sustainability. A core part of her job is to educate people on how to properly recycle, as well as hosting workshops on how to clean with less toxic chemicals by making your own "green" cleaners.

When the Chinese government informed the U.S. and Europe last year that it would no longer accept recyclables due to contamination, it led to major shifts in what counties would accept at the curb. Oregon is adapting by finding new local markets for recyclables, but in the meantime the change means more is thrown out. The County is also asking privately owned sorting facilities to update their machinery, but it's expensive.

Stacy shared a recycle guide flyer (found at clackamas.us/recycling) and discussed the main rules for mixed recycling and glass. She emphasized that the recycle symbol is meaningless when it comes to recycling -- the symbol and number are indicators of the type of plastic, not whether it is recyclable.

Surprises on what cannot be recycled include to-go containers, also called clamshells, which is so thin it breaks apart and the machines mistake it as paper; coffee cups or frozen food boxes, which are lined with plastic; and tin can lids or plastic containers under six ounces - such as medicine containers or small yogurt containers, as they are too small.

Lesser known recyclable items include five gallon buckets, and thick-layered cartons that items like broth, soy milk, soup, etc. come in, as the layers allow machines to take the useable parts and discard the rest. Labels do not need to be removed from tin cans, as they get burned off in the smelter. Stacy suggests putting small bits of paper into a larger paper bag, otherwise the machines may discard them, and that tape does not need to be removed from cardboard boxes.

Plastic bags including grocery bags or any "stretchy" bag can be recycled, such as bread bags, water bottle bag wrappers, paper towel wrappers, and more (whether or not it has the recycle symbol per above). Also, the bottle deposit was raised to ten cents and includes more bottle types. Recycle locations can be found at OregonMetro.gov/FindaRecycler.

Stacy shared a list of items that do not belong in garbage, such as medical sharps, electronics, batteries and other hazardous waste, and more. A resident asked if and how solar panels could be recycled, which the County will follow up on. Another asked whether we would see a styrofoam or plastic bag ban similar to Portland, and Stacy said she had not heard of that extending to unincorporated Clackamas County at this time.

The agenda had two land use applications including the request for a forest template test to establish a single family residence on Killdeer Road. The board explained that this occurs when a property is zoned as Timber. A 160 acre square centered over the property is used to determine the number of parcels it touches, as well as dwellings on those parcels. It's very "black and white," the board said, and "no set of inputs is going to make a difference" on whether one can proceed with a template test. Residents voted 34 in favor of "no comment at this time" and two abstained.

The second land use application was by Mountain Meadow Solar who is requesting photovoltaic a solar power generation facility (passive solar panels) to be added on 10 acres on Killdeer Road. Almost 40 neighbors from the area around Mountain Meadow, Yeoman, and Killdeer roads were present at the meeting in opposition to the application. The board spoke with the land owner and he chose not to attend, and the business owners could not attend due to travel.

The board had received emails and letters from many residents in opposition, which will

About the Bulletin

Beavercreek Bulletin is a monthly newspaper by and for residents of The Hamlet of Beavercreek, Oregon. Our mission is to inform and educate residents on key issues that affect the Hamlet in order to protect and preserve our rural way of life. be sent in entirety to the hearings officer along with a letter from the Hamlet. The board stated that they are not here to approve or support the application, but to serve as a conduit to the County while providing residents helpful information for the hearings and how to best prepare.

The board emphasized that written comments received by the County planning staff by October 8 will be considered in the recommendation to the hearings officer on October 18. The contact is Clay Glasgow at clayg@clackamas.us. It's also crucial to organize as a group and present in a united way at the public hearing. The typical order of presentation is: applicant, staff, anyone in favor, anyone opposed. It's an informal, face-to-face discussion in which the hearings officer is reviewing the code and what makes sense for this particular application.

One resident said Lane and Yamhill counties have put a moratorium on solar development. One resident had reviewed 20 previous applications for solar developments in Clackamas County and all were approved. The important thing to address is the conditional use. The group discussed the Timber District Ordinance and what is allowable with regard to solar, as well as several possible angles to pursue with the hearings officer related to zoning, erosion, and road use and safety in the event of an emergency, among others.

Residents expressed other downsides of a solar farm in a residential neighborhood including a 10-20% reduction in property values, a cyclone fence with barbed wire and high voltage signs being a safety hazard to wildlife and neighborhood children, a water runoff issue that would compound existing drainage issues and could trigger nearby landslide areas, the potential for increased pesticide use which would go into the well water, current issues with water pressure that may be intensified by a commercial facility, the potential for school bus stop changes.

A resident who is a mortgage lender suggested it would be more difficult to get a loan next to a solar facility. One suggested the nearest power station was 3.3 miles away, which would require an upgrade to power lines to export power. A suggestion was made to put the solar farm on land that is not in agricultural or timber production, such as an old landfill site or similar.

A resident had visited another solar development by the same business owner in Colton, saying it was “really ugly” and that the neighbors have cited runoff issues and are afraid of pesticides in the pond. They also said the builder promised to add trees or shrubs to beautify the perimeter but nothing had been done. If this one goes through, he said, residents should ask the builder to create a decommission fund as there’s no promise they will remove it after the 30-year agreement expires.

A resident suggested contacting 1000 Friends of Oregon who has been working with the State and Oregon counties for years on maintaining the agricultural land base while balancing the need for renewable energy sources. The board again emphasized the importance of showing up in person at the meeting with a unified front. Residents voted to oppose the application with 36 in favor, zero opposed and two abstaining. The board voted four in favor, one opposed, and two abstaining.

The board reminded everyone that Hamlet elections are happening at the October meeting. Bill Merchant, Christine Kosinski, Tammy Stevens are running for re-election and there will be one open board seat which will be appointed by the new board. For old business, the Hamlet is asking people to join the volunteer list for when project help is needed. Email info@beavercreek.org to be added.

The County is instituting a new $30 vehicle registration fee to pay for road maintenance with 40% of taxes collected going to cities and 60% going to the county. They spoke with cities, but none of the CPOs or Hamlets so the County is working fast to rectify that through a Community Leaders meeting. Of the 60% going to the County, the Hamlet board and other community leaders are doing what they can to ensure some monies come to rural areas. Regarding the tax itself, a resident asked if lightly used farm vehicles are taxed the same as heavy use. The County understands that is not fair and the board is continuing that discussion, as well as on Veteran's vehicles.

The Willamette Falls Legacy Project is starting to seek help. If you're interested, get in touch with the Hamlet board. If you have a PO Box, you can now use the Street Addressing feature which allows you to have a "street address" rather than a PO Box, which is useful for shipping packages. The Hamlet website at beavercreek.org is currently using Meetup.com for the back-end, which is limiting. Volunteers will be updating it to make it more useable and useful to the community. A resident has also volunteered to create a "little free library" at Korner Park where residents can take a book and leave a book. It will also house the Beavercreek Bulletin.

The board recently met with the Clackamas River Water (CRW), our regional water service provider, to get an update on water issues in our area after two wells went dry this summer near Yeoman Road. One of them, whose well is 265 feet deep, said they contacted 25 well companies who all quoted a three to six month wait. Just one in St. Paul was able to come out and take a look. In the interim, they got cisterns and water from the fire station to care for themselves, horses, and chickens. Another resident in proximity of Yeoman said they recently got annexed into CRW, which took a year.

Previous meetings have discussed the potential for increased development by Oregon City putting a strain on Beavercreek's water supply. The good news is that CRW has a certified water right that can't be revoked. The bad news is that Oregon City, West Linn, Lake Oswego and others have conditional use rights, which can be revoked at any time. If the water levels get too low - and they're getting lower every year - then rationing could be implemented similar to what was done in California in recent years. Residents are encouraged to attend public CRW meetings to learn and share.

The Beavercreek Elementary School pickup and dropoff was changed this year after public and parent meetings deemed it unsafe, however, new safety issues have arisen. Traffic is backing up down the busy Beavercreek road, which has led to near-accidents. The groups are meeting again soon to discuss new options.

The October Hamlet meeting is a Town Hall with guest speaker Michelle Amend, Clackamas County Code Enforcement Department, and attended by Katie Wilson, Liaison, Clackamas County Elections.

The Hamlet of Beavercreek is here to protect and preserve the rural culture of the area, and serves to help all residents. Monthly meetings are the best place to share feedback and learn how to get involved. Join us at 7:00 p.m. the third Wednesday of each month at the Beavercreek Grange.

New Water Rights Handout Available

By Cathy McQueeney, Clackamas Soil & Water Conservation District

Water rights are a frequent topic of conversation during the long, hot summer here in Clackamas County. How can one obtain a water right? Do I need one? And, frequently, just what is a water right?

A water right is the legal right of a user to take and use water from a water source such as a river, stream, pond, groundwater well, or lake. In Oregon, under the Oregon Water Code of 1909, all water belongs to the public. With few exceptions, cities, businesses, farmers, and other water users must obtain a water right from the Water Resources Department (WRD) in order to use water from any source.

Generally speaking, landowners with water flowing past, through, or under their property do not automatically have the right to use that water without authorization from the WRD.

New Handout Provides Simple Guidelines, Information

Amy Kim, the District 20 Watermaster, has a lot of experience answering people's questions about water rights. She recently shared a new handout Understanding Water-Use Regulations in Oregon. This 2-page, easy to read document covers the following questions:

- What are the water-use authorization options?
- What else should you know about the use of your water right?
- How do I obtain a water right permit in the State of Oregon?
- What sources of water are exempt from the permitting process and how can the water be used?
- Who is my local Watermaster?

Get the handout:

Water is a Finite Resource

Water may seem plentiful here in Clackamas County, which includes numerous lakes and rivers, streams beyond counting, and rainfall that lasts for months on end, but this resource is limited. There are many demands on Oregon's water resources and trying to address everyone's water needs is a difficult task.

Water is used for irrigating cropland and producing livestock. It is needed for domestic, use including drinking water, for recreation, and industrial manufacturing.

Water is also necessary to the survival of our native fish and other aquatic life, as well the health of our many watersheds.

The Clackamas Soil and Water Conservation District provides FREE technical resources to help landowners find ways to conserve their water resources. This allows them to be successful land managers while still protecting our resources for people down stream and into the future. Our conservation planners can provide valuable information on topics such as irrigation efficiency, mud and manure management, streamside/riparian restoration, and more. Beavercreek Dog Owner Takes Honors at Dog Agility Championship

Patty Bensene and her dog Raven of Beavercreek took top honors in two categories at the United States Dog Agility Association

Western Regional Championships in Prunedale, Calif., Sept. 1-3. Hundreds of canine athletes and their handlers gathered at the Manzanita Park Sports Complex to compete for top honors as well as qualification to the Cynosport World Games, the National Dog Agility Championship to be held in Arizona this fall.

Raven, a 5-year-old German shepherd, took first place in her height class (20") in the Performance Masters Challenge Biathlon, which requires mastery on both a standard agility and jumpers course, each of European-style design; and in the Performance Speed Jumping category.

Bensene, a professional dog trainer, said she started agility in the late 1990s: "I was an athlete and wanted something to do with my dog as a team." She added that Raven has been the #1 tournament German shepherd in USDAA for three years and is also a truffle

Hearing Loss Happens at Any Age

This school year, SAIF doesn't want students to fail their hearing tests. That's the message behind two new PSAs from Oregon's not-for-profit workers' compensation company, available at <https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PL331BVFvRJ3JrgaiUb5t5KJhWWFpsLCfv>.

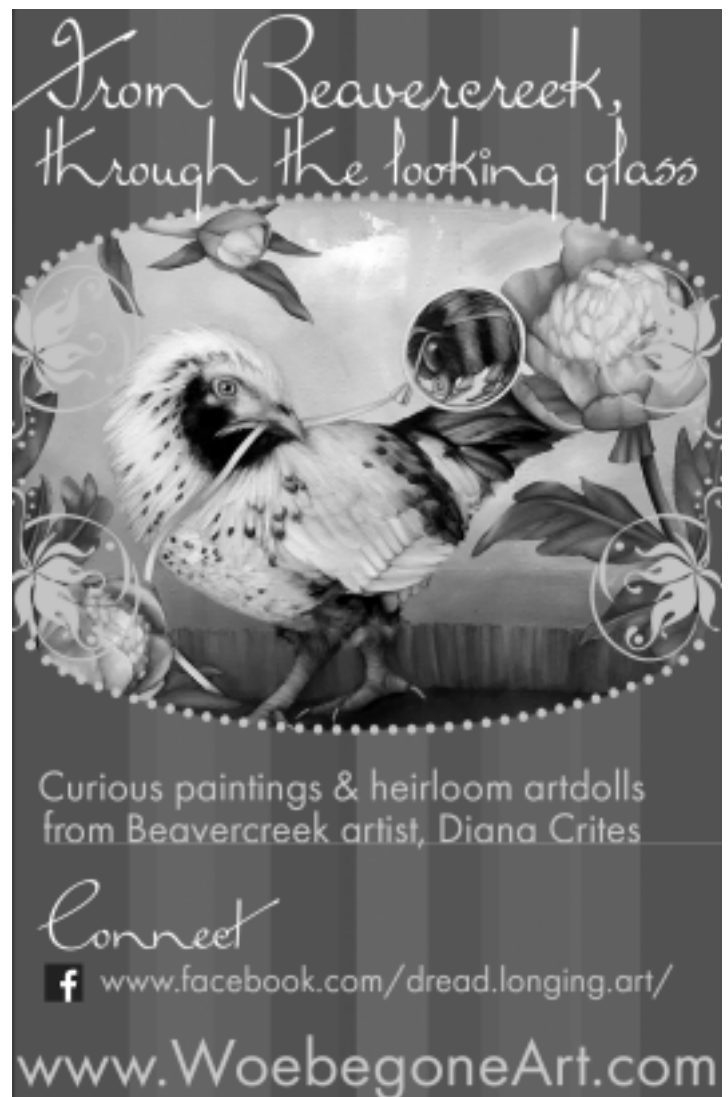

"We tend to think hearing loss only happens as you age, but exposure to loud noises can cause hearing loss at any age," said David Johnson, SAIF's industrial hygiene supervisor. "And whether you're not wearing proper hearing protection in high noise environments, or listening to music too loud while you're studying, you're putting your ears at risk."

SAIF recommends employees wear hearing protection when exposed to noise above 85 decibels. The National Institute on Deafness and Other Communication Disorders (NIDCD) estimates lawn mowers have between 80 and 100 decibels; headphones at top volume can be as high as 110 decibels. More information on hearing loss at any age can be found at saif.com/noise.

Safe Online Surfing

Your kids are starting to settle back into the school routine, and, as they do, many of them are carrying phones with them to class. They are also spending more and more time online for legitimate reasons – whether it is for typing exercises, research for a speech or practicing math. While technology is an awesome tool for educators, there are steps that you can take to set your child up to be both successful and safe online.

To that end, the FBI has developed a computer literacy program called "Safe Online Surfing" or "SOS". Teachers and administrators can utilize this program in the school setting – or parents can use it one-on-one with their children at home. The Safe Online Surfing program includes age-specific materials for grades three through eight, and it is now also available in Spanish. This program is completely free for you to use.

SOS is a series of grade-appropriate online games that allow your child to have fun while learning some important lessons. The student will explore what good online etiquette looks like, how to manage cyber bullies, and how good passwords and double authentication help keep them safe. They will learn about what they should do before downloading that new app or game onto their phone – and how to screen friend requests in a responsible way. And, they will also be able to investigate the

Survey for Veterans to Improve Clackamas County Services

Clackamas County Veterans Services Office helps military veterans and their families get the benefits they have earned. VA benefits are not received automatically and navigating the benefits process can be confusing. The County is seeking input from Veterans on the best way to connect with them to share information via various social media sites. If you are a Veteran, share your feedback with the County in this short, anonymous survey: www.surveymonkey.com/r/KGYBYXF. One Dead by Drunk Driver on Beavercreek and Henrici

On Tuesday September 11, 2018 at approximately 11:05 p.m. Clackamas County Sheriff's Office deputies responded to a reported injury traffic crash at the intersection of S Beavercreek Rd. and S. Henrici Rd. It was reported that there were two vehicles involved and that one of the vehicles was on fire. Once deputies arrived on scene it was discovered that one of the involved vehicles was fully engulfed in flames. Deputies performed CPR on the operator of one of the vehicles until medical units arrived, however they were unable to save the patient. Identification of the deceased is pending family notifications.

Following the investigation the operator of one of the vehicles, identified as Douglas M. McCann, 20 years old from Oregon City, was arrested for Manslaughter, DUII, Criminal dangers of plagiarism and privacy violations.

Here are some helpful tips for parents, as well:

- Talk to your kids about what kinds of information, photos and videos are appropriate to share – and what's not. Remind them that even sending one picture to a friend can lead to an entire school seeing what might be a child's most embarrassing moment.
- Teach your kids how to limit the information they put online. They shouldn't be posting their full name, date of birth and school information on social media platforms or give it to third party vendors.
- Train your kids that free software, apps and downloads may sound great – but in some cases they can be illegal. In other cases, you are opening up your phone and computer to potential malware attacks.

Mischief I X2, Reckless Driving, and Reckless Endangering, and transported to the Clackamas County Jail where he was booked. The investigation is continuing and anyone who may have seen Mr. McCann on September 11, 2018 is urged to call the CCSO Tip Line at (503) 723-4949 or leave an online tip here:

Scholarship Fraud

The start of the school year can be both highly anticipated and cause high anxiety. No matter how you look at it, college is expensive.

Between tuition, room and board, and the price of books, students can face overwhelming costs. For this reason, many people begin to search for scholarships and grants as a way to ease the financial burden. Unfortunately, many con artists have taken advantage of this fact and are luring people into scholarship and financial aid scams.

Today we will share some information with you that comes from our partners at the Federal Trade Commission about how you can avoid getting scammed on your way to college.

There are many companies that charge more than $1,000 for assistance in finding financial aid opportunities and scholarships. Much of the information that they provide is available elsewhere for free.

Many fraudulent businesses will also guarantee that you will receive a scholarship or grant -- if you pay upfront for their services. Some will use high-pressure tactics, such as "buy now or forever miss this opportunity," to coerce people into paying right away. Another common tactic is to tell you that you have been selected as a "finalist" for a scholarship that requires a bank account number to confirm the identity of the student. Many of these deceitful companies will even offer a "customer satisfaction or money back" guarantee. However, if you look closely at the conditions, you will see that it is virtually impossible to get the refund.

So before you pay for help to find scholarships and grants, keep the following things in mind:

- Take your time to decide if you want to use a company that requires a fee. Do not let anyone rush or pressure you into a quick buy. Do research on the company and talk to a financial aid advisor before spending money. If it is a valid company, the offer will be still be available in a couple of days.
- Remember that the government never requires you to pay a fee to receive a "free" government grant. If the grant has been awarded to you, there will be no "processing fee."
- Take the success stories shared at seminars with a grain of salt. The company might have paid someone to share a glowing story. Try to find reviews from an outside source to confirm the validity of the company.
- Ask lots of questions. Figure out exactly how much money you are going to be charged, the services that they are promising to provide, and learn about their refund policy. Get this information in writing.

Some companies that offer to help you are legitimate and do provide services, but you should definitely do your homework and read all of the fine print ahead of time.

And, again, be wary of paying for services that you can get for free elsewhere.

If you have been victimized by a scholarship or grant scam or any other cyber fraud, be sure to report it to the FBI's Internet Crime Complaint Center at www.ic3.gov or call your local FBI office.

get prepared for both natural and human-caused disasters.

Home inventory is often overlooked as part of disaster preparation and protecting your personal property. Do two simple tasks that will save time, money, and stress when disaster strikes:

1. Build a home inventory – Take video or photos of each room in your home, paying close attention to walls, drawers, closets, and storage areas. Recalling your personal property is a daunting task following a disaster. A home inventory eases the post-disaster stress, and enables your insurance company to move forward with processing your claim.
2. Review your insurance coverage – Take time to discuss your policies with your insurance company or agent. Make sure you have the right coverage and know what to expect when you file a claim for disasters such as fire, earthquake, flood, tornado, theft, and ice storms.

October 7, 10:00am-3:00pm
Veterans Memorial Building, 104 S. Tumwater Dr.
Oregon City

Are you looking for that one special item to finish the décor in your home? Do you just love unique and original items? Or, do you just love the thrill of the hunt? No matter your motivation, you never know what you may stumble across. We have vendors of all sorts: Craft Items, Home & Garden Décor, Antiques, Vintage & Collectibles, Kitchenware, Glassware, New-Used-Crafted Jewelry and much more. Proceeds from event fees go to the Auxiliary Veterans Programs.

We welcome donations of personal hygiene products for our Veterans and Military members and their families who are in need. We also accept Cotton and Flannel Fabric as we make Lap Quilts and neck pillows for the Portland VA Hospital. Sorry, we do not accept other types of donations as we do not have space to store clothing and household goods and furniture.

We welcome volunteers who like to craft as in cut & sew fabric, crochet and knit. Contact Janice Wilson 503-708-6889 for more information.

Nearly 60 employers are participating including: Jacobs Engineering, Clackamas Federal Credit Union, Intel, OHSU, Providence Health Services, PGE, UPS and Gresham Police Department. clackamas.edu/careerfair

Breaking the Silence: Stories of Oregon's LGBTQ Veterans [Film]

October 9, 1:00pm & 6:00pm screenings
CCC VET Center, 19600 Molalla Ave.

Before September 2011, no person who identified as lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgender could serve openly in the United States military. Those who did serve were forced to do so secretly, at risk to themselves and their families. In 2011, Don't Ask Don't Tell was repealed, making it legal for LBG Americans to serve openly without fear of official reprisal or discharge. In June 2016, the ban keeping transgender Americans from serving openly was also lifted. Shortly thereafter, the Oregon Department of Veterans' Affairs began to record the stories of veterans and service members from across the state who were forced to serve in silence. The result is this film.

The public is invited to this free event. Screenings will be followed by a presentation from Nathaniel Bohme, LGBT veterans coordinator for the Oregon Department of Veterans Affairs. Light refreshments will be provided.
