Fatal Crash on Henrici Road

The morning of Wednesday, January 29, a local teen was killed when he veered off the road and collided with a tree. A homeowner heard the crash and called 911. Authorities say the driver was Charles Anthony Brennan, 16, of Oregon City. Crash investigators extracted Brennan from the vehicle and began life-saving efforts, but he was pronounced deceased at the scene. Oregon City High officials were notified, and have made counselors available to students as needed. The family has asked for privacy at this time.

One City, One Book Program Starts This Month

The Oregon City Public Library, in conjunction with Clackamas Community College, is hosting a One City, One Book community-wide read of Heidi Durrow's The Girl Who Fell from the Sky. The Girl Who Fell from the Sky reveals an unfathomable past and explores issues of identity at a time when many people are asking "Must race confine us and define us?". In the tradition of Jamaica Kincaid's Annie John and Toni Morrison's The Bluest Eye, here is a portrait of a young girl--and society's ideas of race, class, and beauty. It is a winner of the Bellwether Prize, established by writer Barbara Kingsolver, for best fiction manuscript addressing issues of social justice.

Throughout the month of February, the library will have programs, book groups, and other events culminating in a visit from the author herself. Visit <https://bit.ly/37Otg4F> to learn more and see the events calendar for specific events.

Spay and Neuter Feral Cats for Free in February

The Feral Cat Coalition of Oregon (FCCO) is offering free spay/neuter services for feral and stray cats in February. Individuals who are feeding feral or stray cats qualify for this special offer, regardless of income or where they live. Services include spay/neuter surgery, vaccines, flea treatment, pain relief medication and an ear-tip for identification. FCCO has humane live traps available to safely catch and transport cats and instructions so even if you haven't trapped before you'll be successful. To schedule an appointment call 503-797-2606 or visit feralcats.com. Space is limited.

Use Multi-Factor Authentication for Digital Protection

It sounds complicated, but multi-factor authentication (MFA) really isn't that difficult. MFA is just a process that requires you to prove who you are in more than one way. Banks, utilities, social media platforms, and more are using this technology every day to protect your private data.

Remember the last time you had to answer a challenge question to get into your account? Or you received a one-time PIN via text or email to confirm that it was really you who forgot your password and are now trying to reset it? That is multi-factor authentication.

There are three categories of credentials: something you know, something you have, and something you are. Let's break that down:

- "Something you know" would be your password or a set PIN that you use to access an account. The PIN doesn't typically change.
- "Something you have" would be a security token or app that provides a randomly-generated number that rotates frequently. The token provider confirms that you – and only you – could know what that number is. Also, "something you have" could include verification texts, emails, or calls that you must respond to before accessing an account.
- "Something you are" includes fingerprints, facial recognition, or voice recognition. Sounds a bit unnerving – but think about how you unlocked your smart phone this morning. You've probably used your prints or your face several times already today just to check your email.

Multi-factor authentication is required by some providers, but for others it is optional. If given the choice, it is in your best interest to take advantage of MFA whenever possible but definitely when dealing with your most sensitive personal data. This includes your primary email account, your financial records, and your health records.

To make it easy, the U.S. Department of Homeland Security has gathered a list of links from all the major players to walk you through how to set up multi-factor authentication. The list includes the biggest banks, social media platforms, email providers, gaming sites, online health record providers, shopping sites, cloud storage companies, and more. You can get to it by going to <https://bit.ly/2GGHAQK>.

If you have been victimized by a cyber fraud, be sure to report it to the FBI's Internet Crime Complaint Center at www.IC3.gov or call your local FBI office.

Apply to Join High School National Youth Council

FEMA is seeking applicants for its Youth Preparedness Council. The council offers an opportunity for youth leaders to serve on a distinguished national council and participate in the Youth Preparedness Council Summit in Washington, D.C. Students from Alaska and Oregon currently represent FEMA Region 10. Council members serve a two-year term beginning in May.

The Youth Preparedness Council members offers an opportunity for young leaders to complete a youth preparedness project of their choosing while learning about youth disaster preparedness from FEMA leadership and other national organizations. During their two-year term, council members will complete a national-level group project and share their opinions, experiences, ideas, solutions, and questions with FEMA and other preparedness organizations.

Students in 8th through 11th grade are eligible to apply. Youth interested in applying to the council must submit a completed application form, two letters of recommendation, and their academic records. All applications and supporting materials must be received no later than 11:59 p.m. Eastern Standard Time, March 8, 2020.

To access the application materials, read about the current council members, and for more general information about the Youth Preparedness Council visit <https://bit.ly/2RNgA8i>.

Willamette Falls Legacy Project Update

The path to providing public access to Willamette Falls could take a new direction as project partners collaborate with the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde, which recently purchased the shuttered mill site in downtown Oregon City.

The Tribes have begun design work, in partnership with the Legacy Project, to assess the possibility of routing visitors entirely along the river to a prominent viewpoint of the Falls, instead of providing interim access through the middle of the former mill site.

Groundbreaking on the riverwalk, previously expected to occur this year, has now shifted while the group evaluates a possibly more scenic riverwalk experience.

Phase One of the riverwalk is still anticipated to include safe and secure public access onto the former Blue Heron paper mill site, a prominent view of Willamette Falls and habitat restoration along the riverbank. The location of the initial path to the overlook may be different than previously envisioned, however, and the groundbreaking schedule has shifted to accommodate exploring this alternative approach.

Skiing and Snowboarding for Blind Athletes

Northwest Association for Blind Athletes (NWABA) will be hosting evening skiing and snowboarding experiences for individuals who are blind or visually impaired at Mt. Hood Meadows. NWABA's skiing and snowboarding events will take place from 5:30 – 7:30 pm on Wednesday, February 19, 2020 and Wednesday, February 26, 2020. Anyone who is blind or visually impaired is encouraged to join in this opportunity to learn basic fundamentals and skills to participate in skiing and snowboarding. Only 12 spaces available per night. Equipment rental, lift pass, and transportation are included. To reserve your space, register online at www.nwaba.org/events or email programsteam@nwaba.org.

Be 2 Weeks Ready

Many people in the Pacific Northwest are aware of the dangers of the Cascadia

Subduction Zone since wider attention has been drawn to the 600-mile fault that runs from northern California to British Columbia, about 70-100 miles off the Pacific coast. The last Cascadia earthquake and tsunami occurred in this fault on January 26, 1700, with an estimated 9.0 magnitude.

Although it's been 320 years since the last Cascadia event, we know another one will happen and that it's a good idea to be prepared. It's not a matter of if, but rather when, the next Cascadia earthquake and tsunami will strike.

Althea Rizzo, geologic hazards program coordinator for Oregon's Office of Emergency Management, says that knowing what to do, and how to be prepared for a large-scale earthquake, or any disaster, can help to calm fear and empower people to take action. That action, says Rizzo, includes putting together a family plan and emergency kits to be 2 Weeks Ready.

"Being prepared to be self-sufficient for two weeks is an achievable goal and you may be more prepared than you think," says Rizzo. "See what you already have and you can get there over time."

Leadership in Oregon is making it a priority to get better prepared for the next Cascadia event. On Monday January 27, Governor Kate Brown is scheduled to attend an event commemorating the anniversary of Cascadia, and a briefing on the seismic safety technology called ShakeAlert, where she will also officially proclaim January 26-February 1 as Cascadia Earthquake Preparedness Week.

“When the next large-scale Cascadia earthquake and tsunami strike the Pacific Northwest, Oregon will face the greatest challenge of our lifetimes,” said Governor Kate Brown. “To be ready to recover, we must be aware and prepared. In the aftermath of a large-scale natural disaster, Oregonians will have to count on each other in the community, in the workplace, and at home until first responders are able to reach them. I urge everyone to start conversations this week with their families, friends, and loved ones about how to be safe and as ready as possible, especially by having two weeks of ready supplies.”

Oregon Office of Emergency Management has many tools and resources to be prepared for a Cascadia quake and other disasters.

Healthy Living Fair

Feb. 12, 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m.
CCC, 19600 Molalla Ave.

Clackamas Community College's Associated Student Government (ASG) is holding a healthy living fair as part of its wellness week on the Oregon City campus. The healthy living fair aims to engage students and staff with health-related information and provide health and wellness resources from the community. Past health fairs have featured local fitness centers, nutrition and supplement vendors, medical professionals, health coaches, massage therapists and naturopaths. Support local health and wellness vendors and get resources for a healthy lifestyle at this free public event. For questions, call Michelle Baker at 503-594-3041 or email mbaker@clackamas.edu.

Fun di Volt: From the Vault Art Exhibit

Feb. 18-March 26
CCC Alexander Gallery

"Fun di Volt: From the Vault" features a collection of never-before-seen paintings and drawings by artist Ben Killen Rosenberg. Killen Rosenberg finds inspiration in his everyday life.

His works include imagery and references to his home, his pets and his collection of 1940s movie posters to create large-scale compositions. This exhibition is free and open to the public. An informal reception talk will be held Wednesday, Feb. 26, noon-1:30 p.m., at the Alexander Gallery. The artist will speak about his work at 1 p.m. The Alexander Gallery is located in Niemeyer Center on the Oregon City campus, 19600 Molalla Ave., and is open Monday-Friday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m., with the exception of campus holidays. For questions, contact Kate Simmons at 503-594-3032 or kates@clackamas.edu. For more information on Clackamas Community College's art exhibits and performances, visit www.clackamas.edu/art.
